

This is my first time working with node.js and I found it to certainly be a worthwhile addition to the knowledge I have gained from this class. It is a good place to wrap up the semester giving us the ability to make pages and actually receive feedback from them. Switching to server side coding that would allow us to do so much more outside of the browser. In addition it functions right alongside and meshes really well with everything else we worked on this semester. Each week came together building up our portfolio of new coding knowledge to wrap up the semester and I am for one grateful for that.
